

Frequently Asked Questions

What is an IEP?

An IEP is a written statement of the education program designed to meet a child's individual needs. Every child who receives special education services must have an IEP. The IEP has two general purposes: 1) to set reasonable learning goals for your child; and 2) to state the services that the school district will provide for your child. The IEP will contain information about your child's present levels of education performance, annual goals, special education services, dates and location of those services, and participation in state and district- wide testing.

How can a child be referred for help?

A student can be referred for assessment by a parent, teacher, or other school staff member. If you are concerned about your child's progress, contact your child's teacher or principal to request a meeting to discuss your concerns.

What are transition services?

Transition services are services or goals that are developed to provide students with the information and skills needed to plan for a successful "transition" to life post school. Transition services start at age 14 for students on an IEP.

What is the difference between an IEP and a 504 plan?

An IEP is written when a student qualifies for special education under one of 13 qualifying conditions. A 504 plan is a plan of accommodations within the general education setting.
